THE MARJORY PARKER ON UNION WHARF, FAIRHAVEN

With this week's cover we pay a visit to our neighboring town of Fairhaven. Like us, they took an awful beating in the hurricane, and this is just one of the strange results. The "Marjorie Parker" is a big schooner type fishing boat, 90 feet long. What the water and wind did in such a short time, will present her movers with quite a problem. It's quite a sight, so drive down and take a look if you get a chance.

To compare notes with the past is always interesting, so we looked up another great storm in Mattapoisett. On September 28, 1815 a great hurricane and flood struck the town. The tide was very high, being fourteen feet above the low water mark. Homes and businesses were destroyed. The big industry at that time was salt manufacture and some of the buildings were broken up and floated to Wareham. The Ship Street area, then known as Canonville, had a shipyard at the foot of the hill and a large stone pier that was used to tie up the ships after they were launched. The wharf was in the same location that now serves as a beach. The great boulders were thrown up and the pier was destroyed, later to be rebuilt in its present location.

Even in those days when the dollar was worth so much, the loss was heavy, for it hit $50,000. Ropewalks, sailing ships and homes were driven inland and destroyed. The town at this time used wells for water, and the salt in addition to killing trees, grass, and crops, also got in the wells. The wells were unuseable until the snows came and dissolved the salt that saturated the ground. If we were faced with the same problem today, however, it would be almost hopeless. For at that time they had real winters and deep snow in November.

THE FOLLOWING WAS WRITTEN BY MRS. R. B. HOLT OF PAWTUCKET, RHODE ISLAND ON HER FIRST VISIT AND IMPRESSION OF MATTAPOISETT IN AUGUST.

One day in August, quite dull and grey
We Priscillas, so happy and gay
Were off to Mattapoisett to be Guests of Mrs. Coderre by the sea.

Soon blue skies replaced the grey,
We ate, then on a friendly tour away
To visit shops, quaint churches and such,
We covered much, but in a rush!

With roots so deep, by the Bay
Lovely homes of another day,
Mattapoisett we love your beauty and lore
Nestled so friendly by the seashore.

As evening drew quickly nigh,
We bade our gracious hostess "Goodbye",
Everyone being loathe to part
From Mattapoisett now dear to each heart.

LONG RANGE WEATHER REPORT by Captain EZRA TWEEDLE

EDITOR IN COMMAND OF
THE WEATHER DESK

Fair and Clear

Well sir it twarnt surprising thet I fell asleep at the whell of my new ship after bein chased all over the town of Mattapoisett with practically no rest atall but I shore did miss the island of Nantucket whar I was headed to fit my vessle with some sails and recruit some sailormen and when I finally woke up I was far to sea with no food and no crew and no sails and I was a might discoraged as the ship had no charts no compas and no sextent. I was plum lost and I fell to broodin but finally I climbed the mainmast to see if I could see a landfall and sure enough on the horizen was a sail a headed my way Well i tell you it was a happy Captain Ezra Tweedle thet clambered down to wait for my rescuer to catch up When they came closer there was a mighty unhappy Capt. Ezra for I counted no less than forty cutthrouts at the rail with sabers and pistols well sir I really turned to in the galley and whipped up a roarin fire in the cookstove and when it twas going good I thru in my leather boots and my woolen peacoat and it twas just then thet the ships came together and the boarding hooks came over the side The critters swarmed aboard yelling like banshees only by now the smoke from my shoes was a whippin out the stovepipe in sich clouds thet they couldn't see thet there was no crew on board so before long there was a mighty battle ragin atwixt them selves.
